SEWER NANCY ARCHER admires a machine similar to the one she won in the recent national contest.

Fads And Fashions

by Evie Williams

Nancy Archie, a very talented member of Mrs. Funchess' seventh homeroom has recently won first place in a national sewing contest given by the Singer Sewing Machine Company.

Nancy, during last summer, took ten sewing lessons and only people taking lessons could enter the contest. She entered the contest for the eleven through thirteen year olds with thirty-eight thousand other girls of that age competing against her. Nancy first showed her dress in Houston, and for winning first place here she received a scissor kit to be used when sewing. Next she sent her dress to the Texas-Louisiana contest and again placed first. As her prize she received a new slant needle sewing machine with all attachments. After sending her dress to New York, Nancy learned she had won first place again, and for her prizes were five hundred dollars and a free trip to New York for herself and her family. During her four days in New York Nancy saw and did many wonderful things including the United Nations Building, the Broadway play "Plain and Fancy", dinner at the Waldorf Astoria and Stork Club, Rockefeller Square with all its skaters.

Nancy made the dress, for which she received all these honors, of cotton and from a McCall's pattern. The top of the dress was close fitting and made of red and blue flower print on an olive background. The sleeves were the puffed baby doll style of the printed cotton. The collar, of plain olive green cotton, came around the neck like a sash and tied on the left shoulder with a small bow. The skirt, of olive green cotton, was gathered at the waist all the way around to the back where it met a few unpressed pleats of the printed cotton. The belt was made of olive green material, and tied in the back in a small bow.

The only rules Nancy had to follow in making her dress was to make it of cotton or wool. She could use any pattern, and the dress had to be made while at the lessons.

All Pershing is proud of Nancy and hopes she will keep up the good work.
